

I have been informed that you are contemplating changing the law in such a respect that it will weaken the Indiana action to limit the protection now afforded by Indiana's telephone Privacy Act. I would like to strongly recommend that you do not do this. This act has provided my family and myself enormous freedom from telephone solitation since we signed up for protection. Before this act, it was not at all unusual to have anywhere from three to ten calls each evening - usually during the dinner hour. These were unwanted calls and were detrimental to the quality of life of my entire family since we endeavor to share the evening meal with each other. Friends and acquaintances were instructed to not call at that time, and it was very distracting to have all these solitations at this time. The Telephone Privacy Act has greatly enhanced my family togetherness and I strongly urge you to do nothing to weaken this protection.
